Personal project, Shelf-Scanner

Medellín, Colombia

- Designed the architecture of the backend of the project to ensure scalability and used Object Oriented structures to define a method of communication so the front end can easily use the models and parse the results.
- Implemented a computer vision model to automate the order analysis of shelves in super markets demonstrating understanding of model inputs and outputs.
- Tuned the model architecture and adjusted the epochs to obtain a precision and recall measurements over 91% while having the smallest possible architecture to ensure faster prediction and training times.
- Implemented machine learning models that allow for comparison between the computer vision model results and the expected order of the items in the shelves using Pandas for data manipulation and Scikit-Learn for the comparison model.
